'Across Great Divides: true Stories of Life at Sydney Cove' is a non-fiction narrative about the experiences and interactions of convicts, marines and Aboriginal residents in Sydney Cove and surrounding areas. The stories are told from first-hand accounts of events. It was written for a general readership however, the themes and stories link to history topics in the Australian Curriculum.

- The stories are all factual, being based on the letters, journals and first-hand accounts of those who lived them.
- The stories are relayed from varying points of view.
- Notes to primary sources are included for each chapter.

'People in Australia's Past: their stories, their achievements' was written as a literacy support resource; the set includes a 'reader' with 18 individual stories, an audio CD and language workbook (with crosswords, comprehension & gap-fill activities etc).

However, the stories of 'significant individuals or groups who played a role in shaping Australia' link well to the Australian Curriculum: Historical Knowledge and Understanding (ACHHK097)
